Handwritten text, likely a letter or document, written in cursive. The text is mirrored across the page, suggesting it was written on the reverse side of the paper. The handwriting is dense and somewhat difficult to decipher due to the cursive style and the presence of several circular postmarks. The text appears to be a formal communication, possibly a letter of introduction or a business correspondence. The mirrored nature of the text is a key feature of this document.

Handwritten text at the bottom of the page, possibly a signature or a date. The text is written in cursive and appears to be "New York Dec 1870".
