Jamaican Red Cross Label

Lewis Ashenheim founded the Jamaican War Stamp League in 1915, intending to aid the British Red Cross. The name was changed in 1916 to the Jamaican Patriotic Stamp League and money was raised, among other things, to buy a British bomber to contribute to the Allied war effort. Red Cross labels were printed by the Dennison Manufacturing Company in Framington, Mass. and three shipments totaling around 1 million labels were delivered in late 1915. A Kingston newspaper publisher, the Gleaner Company, overprinted the labels with the word "Jamaica." The labels were tolerated on mail , when used with regular postage, early into 1917.
