THOM OVERPRINTS (REBEL)

A quantity of the 1d and 2d stamps, captured by the I.R.A. in a raid on Wexford post offices on January 6, 1923, was apparently left out in the rain and spoilt. The stamps were subsequebtly dipped in gum, dried, and reissued by the rebels and may be recognized by the glazed appearance of the surface, caused by the gum on the front. The gumming was done with a thick, brownish gum applied with a coarse brush. The white portions of the 1d stamps have turned a dirty pink, owing to the running of the color when the stamps were soaked. Comparatively speaking, the 2d stamps in this condition are rare, while the 1d is usually found in pairs with Wexford postmarks up to the end of February 1923. The bulk of these stamps were subsequently recaptured by the Free State forces and appear to have been put into circulation in the normal way.
