Post Office Independence

The Jersey and Guernsey Post Offices have been responsible since 1st October 1969 for providing postal services within their own independently governed territories. Previously the Channel Islands had relied on the General Post Office of Great Britain for all postal administration.

The two Bailiwicks have much in common, not least being a reliance on air and sea transport for the conveyance of mail.

This joint stamp issue celebrates 25 years of postal independence and features some of the aircraft and shipping that have served the Islands.
