ON HIS MAJESTY'S SERVICE.

To The Registration Officer of the County of the Borough

Instructions for filling up Form.

1. A soldier, if he has reached 19 years of age, may be registered as a Parliamentary voter for the place in the United Kingdom where he would have been resident if he were not serving as a soldier. Generally speaking, that is the place where his home is or would be if he had not joined the Forces.

2. It may also be that, but for his service, he would have been the occupier on his own account of premises for carrying on his profession, trade or business, distinct from his residence, and in another constituency, and if the premises be of a yearly value not less than £10 he should fill up another card entering the address of the premises against the heading "Qualifying Address" in the Form, and writing underneath "Business Premises."

3. A Card must not be filled up by any man who is not a British subject or who will not have attained the age of 19 years on the 15th April, 1918.

The particulars given on the form will be treated as sufficient proof of qualification if there is no evidence to the contrary.

Please see, before posting, that this card is correctly addressed to the Registration Officer of the County or Borough in which the "Qualifying Address" as given on the other side is situated. Cards for Registration Officers in Scotland, however, should be addressed "Edinburgh" simply.

1918 — THE GERMAN 'PUSH' (OPERATION MICHAEL)

The blow fell on 21st March 1918. It was aimed at the thinly-held and extended front of General Gough's Fifth Army, still recuperating from the mauling it had received during 'Third Ypres'. Three German armies attacked simultaneously in that sector, and against half of the front held by General Byng's Third Army, on Gough's left flank.

After an overwhelming barrage from more than 6,000 guns, masses of elite, highly trained German storm troops swept forward in thick mist. Utter confusion reigned in the British lines as many units that had survived the terrifying bombardment (which had included gas) were cut off and destroyed. Due to his manpower problem — he had a front of 42 miles to cover with only twelve infantry divisions and three cavalry divisions — General Gough had decided to rely on powerful strongpoints defended by numerous machine-guns. But the fog enabled the enemy to bypass many of these defensive positions, and as the day wore on things became desperate.

General Ludendorff's strategy was aimed at separating the British and French Armies, with the object of driving the former back to the sea, before turning on the French in the hope that they would sue for peace.

Withdrawals began on the Fifth Army front, and on the second day the British Third positions fell to the enemy in the south. Within 48 hours the battle raged in the open, with over 60 German divisions being engaged.

Péronne was abandoned on 23rd March, and the retreat continued towards the old Somme battlefields. On 25th March the Germans attacked violently all along the front, and, in the south, forced back the British from positions they were holding on the Somme Canal. By the same evening the enemy had driven a deep wedge across the old battlefield zone and had reached the Ancre near Beaumont Hamel. Bapaume, Maricourt, and other towns and villages — many of them in flames — were all captured.

Albert fell to the Germans and a new line was established just west of the town; Amiens, too, was under fire. Scratch units were hurriedly got together in some places, and men who had never thought that they would be engaged in fighting found themselves charging towards the Germans with fixed bayonets. Batmen, cooks, drivers and other non-combatants, all played their part and helped to repulse the enemy.

Courcelette

This village, on the other side of the Bapaume Road, and the battlefield to the north of the village belong to Canadian memory. The Canadian Corps took over the sector to the left of the Bapaume Road from the Australians early in September and remained there until the 1916 fighting ended. Courcelette and the nearby sugar factory were captured by the 2nd and 3rd Canadian Divisions with the help of six tanks in the 15 September attack; it was one of the best advances of that day. Further Canadian divisions then took it in turn to carry out later attacks until the end of the battle in mid-November. Their casualties were over 17,000 men during that period.

ON HIS MAJESTY'S SERVICE.

Instructions for filling up Form.

1. A soldier, if he has reached 19 years of age, may be registered as a Parliamentary voter for the place in the United Kingdom where he would have been resident if he were not serving as a soldier. Generally speaking, that is the place where his home is or would be if he had not joined the Forces.

2. It may also be that, but for his service, he would have been the occupier on his own account of premises for carrying on his profession, trade or business, distinct from his residence, and in another constituency, and if the premises be of a yearly value not less than £10 he should fill up another card entering the address of the premises against the heading "Qualifying Address" in the Form, and writing underneath "Business Premises."

3. A Card must not be filled up by any man who is not a British subject or who will not have attained the age of 19 years on the 15th April, 1918.

The particulars given on the form will be treated as sufficient proof of qualification if there is no evidence to the contrary.

Please see, before posting, that this card is correctly addressed to the Registration Officer of the County or Borough in which the "Qualifying Address" as given on the other side is situated. Cards for Registration Officers in Scotland, however, should be addressed "Edinburgh" simply.
