On all plates of the 1/5 (1A, 1B, 2A and 2B) the top horizontal line of the design commences normally at the upper left-hand corner and becomes progressively weaker as it approaches the right-hand half of the design. Immediately above the wing of the Angel the extremely weak horizontal is strengthened by an obvious short line some ½mm in extent. This condition is present on all stamps—with one exception: row 10, No. 1, plate 2B, shows a perfect, strong upper horizontal without any obvious presence of the usual short, coloured line. Now, why should only a single stamp from a 4-plate series display a perfect design? If you can help, send your news to me, but remember—your solution must be supported by water-tight, personal philatelic opinion!

Additional interest attaches to the same stamp: an obvious constant hair line runs upwards from the lower projection on the right-hand side of the rock and passes between the diagonal stroke separating the shilling value and the 5.
