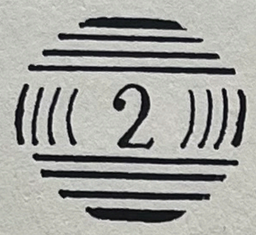
NEW SOUTH WALES NUMERAL CANCELLATIONS

217 – MAJOR's CREEK

Registered envelope posted at Major's Creek, November 7, 1912.
Backstamped "Registered –8 NO 12A Sydney, N.S.W."

NEW SOUTH WALES NUMERAL CANCELLATIONS

"The original allocation of numeral obliterators (the first bar type), was coincidental with the first issue of postage stamps on 1 January, 1850. It consisted of 96 numbers, and covered all post offices opened on or before that date, with the exception of Sydney (which used dumb obliterators).



Type 1a
Four bars at each side
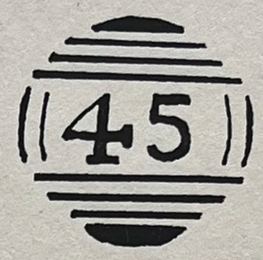
(Nos. 1-20,& 97 onwards)



Type 1b
Two bars at each side
(Nos. 21-96)

The allotment was made according to "lines of road", beginning with the point nearest to Sydney and proceeding outward. The allocation began with the road over the Blue Mountains to the Western Plains- thus, Ryde was No. 1, Parramatta was No. 2, Windsor No. 3 and so on up to No. 19. Numbers 20 to 53 covered the South and Southwest, while Nos. 54 to 92 covered the North, including part of Queensland. The remaining four numbers were allotted to points served by sea, Nos. 93 and 94 to Boyd Town and Eden on the far South Coast, and Nos. 95 and 96 to Brisbane and Maryborough(now in Queensland). Numbers 97 to 178 were allotted to new post offices more or less in their order of opening, with the exception of a number of sub-offices, particularly in the Sydney area, which did not receive numeral obliterators until later.[1]"

Produced locally, the first bar type obliterators continued in use until about April 1857, the highest number probably being No. 175. In cases where original obliterators were replaced, these were all in Type 1a.

"RAY" TYPE OBLITERATORS

General notes:

ray type 2a: Nos. 74, 81, 85, 86, 87, 95, 96, 108, 110, 131, 133, 151, 152, 201, and 214, were allotted to post offices in Queensland.

ray type 2c: Same nos. as above were re-allocated to New South Wales offices after February 1861 when Queensland had its own Postal Administration.

There are a few varieties of the ray type cancellers which do not fit exactly into the main sub-types. Most were probably replacements not made by the usual contractors, or possibly original cancellers which underwent change during repair.[2]

Recorded by the authors:

[2] Brown and Campbell, p. 9.

VERTICAL BAR-TYPE OBLITERATORS

All numeral cancels from 836 onward, and many replacements of earlier numbers,appeared in a vertical bar-type canceller, Type 4, of which there are two sub-types:

Type 4a

(Nos. 39, 836-839)

Type 4b

(Nos. 841 onwards and replacements of earlier Nos.)

Transition types: Type 4X (No. 840) 3 bars above and below, with sidebars.

Type 4Y (No. 205) 5 bars above and below.

Many of the larger offices had duplex cancellers, the obliterator portion of which was of type 4.

MANUSCRIPT AND COLORED CANCELS

Manuscript numeral cancellations are by no means common - far scarcer, in fact, than similar provisional varieties in Tasmania. Those known to exist are: 3, 20, 37, 51, 56, 67, 77, 182, 251, 725, 1899.

Black ink was, from the beginning, used in the usual course of events at all post offices. At certain times, however, the normal ink was apparently unavailable at a few offices, and unusual inks were used. Blue, Violet, brown, and red are the colors that have been recorded, but others probably exist.

QUEENSLAND NUMERAL CANCELLATIONS

In many ways, Queensland is the most difficult State for the collector of numeral cancellations. Not only are there no official lists extant, but there was no original allocation as such, the post offices opened before Partition continuing to use the obliterators originally issued to them by New South Wales (except Brisbane, and its obliterator was used elsewhere). Most if not all of these numerals were later issued to other offices in the Queensland series, so we get duplications. The first three post offices at least opened under Queensland administration received obliterators incorporating the letters "Q.L.", and no numerals, these being, apart from Brisbane, Cleveland, Leyburn, and Marlborough.

The first numbers issued by Queensland, so far as can be ascertained, were Nos. 14 and 15, and then there appears to be a gap, the next number to be found being No. 21. The numbers were then issued, roughly chronologically, apparently right to the end of 1912, the highest number seen being No. 747. However, the situation is complicated by the fact that there were numerous replacements with a new number,re-allocations, and a good many cases where numbers were both re-allocations and replacements.

The position is further complicated by the fact that when the post office was at a railway station,postage stamps were sometimes cancelled with the Railway Parcels obliterators, which had quite a separate series of numbers.Most are readily recognized as the lower numbers are within three concentric circles, and the higher numbers within a rectangle of vertical bars.

Rare cancellation in red used at Barcoo (later named Alice Downs, then Blackall).

The first allocation of numeral obliterators occurred late in 1853 when the first stamps were issued. Originally the Nos. 10 to 64 were used (thus avoiding the 6:9 problem), plus No. 72, which went to Norfolk Island, then under Tasmanian control. Nos. 10 to 58 were allotted to the country post offices in roughly alphabetical order. The two major towns received the last six numbers: Launceston Nos. 59 and 60, and Hobart Nos. 61 to 64. Nos. 65 to 68 were issued later, Hobart using No. 68 and, later again, Nos. 74 and 75. So far as is known, Nos. 69, 70, 71, and 73 were never issued during this first allocation period.

The second allocation was made in 1861, when there were 97 post offices in operation. Hobart began using "dumb" obliterators, so the other 96 offices received new obliterators in alphabetical order. Nos. 97-390 were issued to new post offices roughly in order of opening.

The use of numeral obliterators ceased in September 1900.[1]

The inland letter rate of 4d per ½ ounce was in effect from 1842 when the distance rate schedule was abolished, until 1 March 1858 when it was raised to 6d per ½ ounce. Following strong protest by the public, it was returned to 4d on 31 December 1858, and remained the same until 31 October 1879.

Cover from Oatlands , March 20, 1866 to Miss Henrietta Stokell in Clarence Plains. Henrietta was the eldest daughter of George and Hannah Stokell. George arrived in the Colony by the "Venerable" on 29 December 1822 and developed a large property for raising sheep. Henrietta lived to be 91, passing away on 3 July 1921.

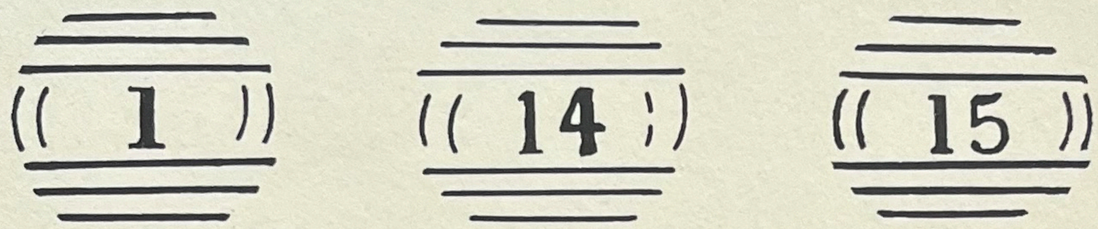
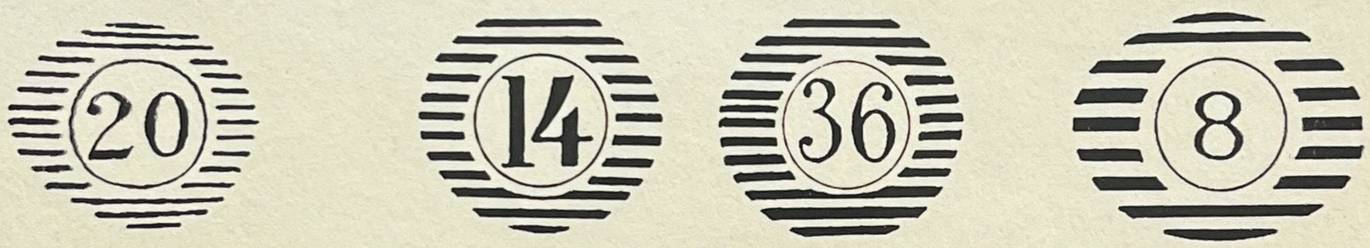
The "Numbered Grids"



The "Barred Numerals"



15-bar 12-bar 9-bar

(b) Inner circle 9.5 to 11.5 mm in diameter: D—COOLGARDIE, F—FREMANTLE, G—GERALDTON, N—NEWCASTLE, R—ROCKINGHAM (?), Y—YORK.

Other duplexes in different styles were: K.G.S—ALBANY, F—FREMANTLE and K—KALGOORLIE. A unique duplex was used at Perth from about 1873, both halves of which consisted of the numeral 80 in a diamond surrounded by a circle of 9 horizontal bars, 5 interrupted, rather similar to the South Australian obliterators; no explanation of this has been put forward.
