STAMP ALBUM
by C. W. HILL

1940
5.DIV.

SWISS soldiers mobilised for the defence of their country during the two world wars were allowed to post their mail free of charge. In 1915 the adjutant of the 38th Infantry Battalion, an artist by profession, designed two stamp-like labels for men in his unit to stick on their letters, if they wished, to indicate to the Post Office that no postal charges were to be levied. The idea caught on and other units began to issue their own labels, many of which were sold cheaply in aid of army charities. The Soldatenmarken, or 'soldiers' stamps', were revived during the Second World War and as they usually have attractive designs resembling military posters, they have become very popular with collectors.
