The Cashel Mail

Known as the Cashel Mail, a coach service commenced between Dublin and Cork via Cashel in 1789 following representations from the citizens of Cork. This resulted in the saving of one or two days in the delivery of letters. The Dublin terminus was in Dawson Street and in Cork, Pembroke Street behind the Imperial Hotel. Two coaches ran daily in each direction For a period from about 1811 to 1835, special markings were struck on letters carried on the mail coach plying between Dublin & Cork. Although applied in Dublin, these marks may well be considered as part of the postal history of Cork.
