Because the art stamps of France are so popular
La Poste have made use of them in various ways to promote philately in general and art in particular.

The displays in frame 5 reflect some of the versatile ways these beautiful stamps have been presented.

Contemporary Art of the European Union

Beginning in 1992 La Poste issued a series of art stamps representing the 12 member states of the EU at that time.

60 years of the Art Stamps of France

The purpose of this exhibit is to display the large format art stamps of France in their many and varied aspects, from the printing methods to the multiple varieties arising from the unique three colour rotary printing press and from the "Imaginary Museum of Art" to the many ways which La Poste, and others, have used and presented these philatelic masterpieces.

This series of the Art Stamps of France commenced in 1961. The theme and design of these beautiful stamps have proven to be extremely popular with collectors worldwide. More than 60 years since their introduction they still remain a feature of the annual stamp issue programme of La Poste.

These large format art stamps cover many periods and styles.

Abstract

The Plan

1. Introduction and first issues
2. Printing methods and varieties arising — Frame 1
3. "The Imaginary Museum of Art" — Frames 2, 3 & 4

The first stamps of the large format Art series were issued on 10th November 1961 and consisted of four stamps. These represented "Modern Painters Through their Works".

During the initial printing of these stamps on the new three colour rotary press experiments were carried out on sheet size. The first stamp of this "set of four" was the Cezanne "Card Players" which was produced ten to a sheet, two vertical strips of five stamps divided by a gutter.

All subsequent printings of the Art series were produced in sheets of 25 stamps (5 x 5), the only exceptions being when they were produced in booklets or souvenir sheets.

Charles Gleyre (1806-1874)

The nucleus of the "Impressionist" group attended the studio of the painter and teacher Charles Gleyre. These young aspiring artists were:

Monet, Sisley, Renoir and Bazille.

It would be reasonable to surmise that the training and guidance of Gleyre had some influence on the future direction of this group leading to their eventual progression to Impressionism!

The movement of Impressionism was a loose assortment of artists who exhibited in Paris in the 1870s and 1880s. Their general style and in particular that of Claude Monet prompted the writer Louis Leroy to derisively describe these works as mere impressions!

Impressionism was not a constant and many of the early artists evolved in to and out of various painting styles in those exciting years.

"The Loing Canal" by Alfred Sisley

Monet was the true master of Impressionism, from the 1870s to his last works in 1926 he remained faithful to his impressionist style painting.

His painting "Women in the Garden" was completed in 1867. This very large work is 2.5 metres in height and It is believed that the model for all four women in the painting was his wife!

Monet settled in Giverny in1883 and a few years later he created a water garden on the property which led to his many "Water Lily" paintings.

Pierre-Auguste Renoir (1841-1919)

The paintings of Renoir are considered to be the most colourful of the Impressionist era. Renoir was primarily a portraiture artist, he loved painting pretty girls and happy scenes. He was also very adept at painting nudes.
